Our school's 70th Year Celebration in November became a heartfelt tribute to the creativity, confidence, and teamwork of our students and teachers. We had been preparing for this important event since August, putting in steady effort, countless rehearsals, and remarkable dedication to perfect every performance. Over three vibrant days, we welcomed parents, students, guest schools, and alumni, all eager to watch the performances we had prepared with great enthusiasm.

The Urdu Theatre play, Taleem-e-Balighaan, was performed twice and created a cheerful atmosphere as laughter spread across the venue. It gave a light and humorous look at adult education and how some people feel shy or confused when returning to learning later in life. The students delivered each scene with excellent expression and timing, making even the simplest jokes come alive on stage. Their get-up added even more charm. Their traditional outfits, simple props, and lively expressions helped the audience connect with the characters instantly. A dedicated make-up team of students worked behind the scenes to complete each character's look with great care and creativity. These thoughtful touches added to the quality of the production.

The English Theatre play, performed thrice, carried a deeper and more emotional message. The play, Masks We Wear, explored how people often hide their real feelings and true selves just to appear perfect in front of others. The students handled this meaningful theme with great maturity and clarity. A special highlight of the English performance was the shadow play, which added a powerful visual effect. Through shadows and movement, students demonstrated inner emotions and silent struggles, capturing the audience's full attention. This creative element brought depth to the story and left a strong impact on the audience.

A powerful moment when our students make the statement, "Be brave, show your true self and take off the masks you wear."

A beautiful portrayal of how caged one would feel if we tried to be perfect for everyone else.

Both plays received warm applause and heartfelt appreciation. The effort put in by the students was clear through their acting and also the way they worked together with discipline, patience, and commitment. Their creativity and confidence reflected months of hard work and practice.

As part of the Closing Ceremony of our 70-Year Celebrations, students from both the Primary and Secondary Sections presented inspiring performances that left a lasting impression on the audience. Pupils from our Primary Section mesmerised the audience with their artistic performance of “Aik Makra aur Makhi” by Allama Muhammad Iqbal. It is a well-known poem conveying the meaningful moral lesson that flattery is often used to achieve one’s goals. Their well-conceived costumes and confident stage presence added visual charm and greatly enhanced the impact of the performance, which was met with enthusiastic applause.

Students from our Secondary Section delivered a stirring rendition of excerpts from “Shikwa” and “Jawab-e-Shikwa,” poems renowned for their musicality, poetic beauty, and depth of thought. Also written by Allama Muhammad Iqbal, who was one of our founder’s favourite poets. Through their powerful and eloquent delivery, the students conveyed profound messages of self-reflection, faith, and accountability. Their performance cast a spellbinding effect on the audience, earning wholehearted appreciation.

The evening became a beautiful reminder of what young minds can achieve when given trust, guidance, and opportunities. Our students honoured the school’s 70-year journey with talent, dedication, and pride, proving that every child carries a spark waiting to shine. When they are supported and encouraged, they do more than perform; they connect, inspire, and remind us of the bright futures they are building, one step at a time.
